

Jackson Myers: Cinematographer, Producer

Jackson Myers is a Cinematographer based in Los Angeles, CA. Raised in Ashland, Oregon, he studied Film Production at Occidental College, and Cinematography at FAMU in the Czech Republic. Since graduating from University in 2006, Jackson has made a living as a cinematographer on a vast array of feature films, television series, commercials, and digital content.

His feature documentary credits include, cinematographer/producer/editor on Samuel Goldwyn Films' 'SOMM' (2012), and its sequel, 'SOMM: Into the Bottle' (2015). His narrative film credits include the Film Noir Feature "Sparks" (2012), as well as short films "Jada" (2016) and "Abby Sanchez P.I." (2016). Jackson was the cinematographer for two seasons on the PBS Television Travel Series "ESCAPESEEKER" (2011-2012).

Jackson continues to work in Los Angeles as a cinematographer and producer on a variety of projects, including the forthcoming feature documentary, "Wait For Your Laugh"(2017). In-between projects, he teaches cinematography workshops at his alma mater, Occidental College.